

Exception classes are for error handling while other objects can be used for their separate purposes. The class that exception class inherits is called Throwable and Java language system can automatically create an object of an exception class and throws it when an error occurs.